

Kathrin Brinkmann – Habitat

Habitat is a service providing public green space that allows city dwellers in the Global South to escape the hustle and bustle of their environment. Faith plays a major role in the Global South and is considered a primary need. Habitat therefore seeks to create more opportunities to engage with faith whilst also advocating a reconnection with nature. The compact spaces for prayer or meditation are integrated into the cityscape, providing a capsule of greenery that helps to re-establish traditional connections between faith and nature. Habitat aims to increase the enjoyment of the user's prayer times as well as the enjoyment of nature, hence encouraging greater care in the interaction with both.
